Artists in Schools Program

The Artists in Schools program is funded by Arts Victoria to provide professional artists the opportunity to work with young people in schools. School engage an artist to work with the students on a creative project which may be in any art form.

For 2010, Winters Flat received a grant for a collaboration with artists Rebecca Russell And Ken Evans. This project will see the development of a short film using historical and contemporary images of the school for presentation at their 150th anniversary celebrations. Working with animated characters and settings, the students will explore the themes of time and place and reinterpret scenes collected from historical research.

Ken and Rebecca are working with the students in MacO, developing skills in visual arts, researching local history, and putting together images for the film. The launch of the completed project will coincide with the school’s 150th anniversary in October.
